

How Admissions Consulting Firms Benefit with Icaro

Our Synthesis Report and Strengths Discovery Session address key pain points for admissions consulting firms, offering tangible benefits

1. Streamlined, Personalized Application Strategies

Crafting individualized application plans is time-intensive, but our report and Strengths Discovery Session simplify the process by:

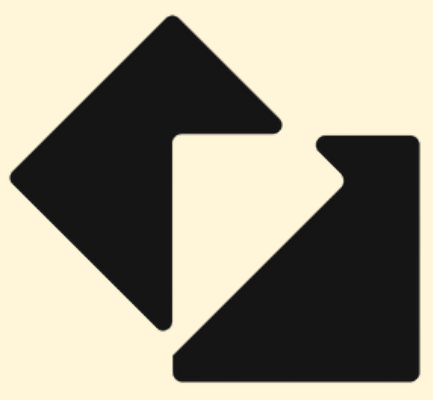

- Providing a pre-analyzed student profile, assisting research time.
- Suggesting specific essay topics, activities, projects, and interview strategies based on assessed traits.
- Aligning recommendations with university priorities, such as interdisciplinary learning or social impact (Forbes).

For example:

- A student with high WGCTA scores can be guided to highlight a data-driven project in their application.
- A student with strong VIA-IS kindness scores can emphasize community service, aligning with universities' focus on social consciousness.

The Strengths Discovery Session ensures students or mentors understand these recommendations, making it easier for your consultants to implement them effectively.

2. Empowering Students to Overcome Self-Awareness Barriers

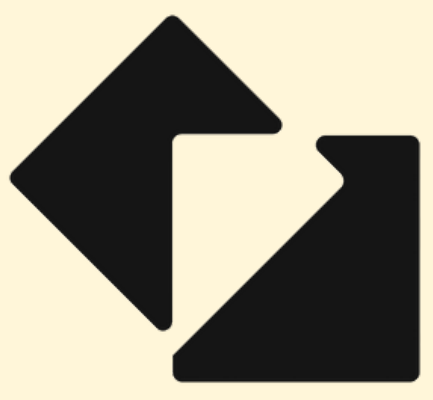

Many students lack the self-awareness to confidently identify their strengths, often due to self-esteem issues or uncertainty about their abilities. Our assessments and synthesis report address this by providing clear, data-driven insights into their personality and cognitive strengths. The Strengths Discovery Session with our Harvard-trained psychologist further reinforces this, helping students overcome the “blank page syndrome” commonly faced when starting essays.

For instance,

A student unaware of their leadership potential might learn through CliftonStrengths that they excel in strategic thinking, enabling them to confidently write about a project they led. This empowers students to start the application process with greater assurance, reducing the initial burden on your consultants, who often rely on students to provide the first draft.

The session's flexible attendance options ensure your firm can tailor the experience to each client, whether involving the student, your mentor, or both, without compromising the expert guidance.

3. Enhanced Recommendation Letters

Counselors and recommenders often face the “blank page” challenge, struggling to write letters that stand out. Our report alleviate this by:

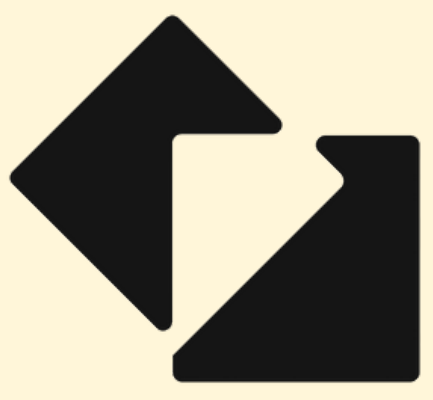

- Offering specific, data-backed examples of a student’s strengths, such as critical thinking or leadership.
- Providing balanced insights into growth areas, ensuring credibility.
- Suggesting anecdotes that make letters vivid and memorable.

For instance:

- For a student with high emotional intelligence, the report might suggest: “Highlight their role in mediating a team conflict, as supported by their Emotional Intelligence Appraisal results.”
- For a student with strong problem-solving skills, it could recommend: “Discuss their innovative solution to a school challenge, as evidenced by Raven’s Matrices performance.”

The Strengths Discovery Session ensures students or mentors understand these recommendations, making it easier for your consultants to implement them effectively.

4. Strategic Interview Preparation

Interviews are a make-or-break moment for many applicants. Our report and Strengths Discovery Session equip you to:

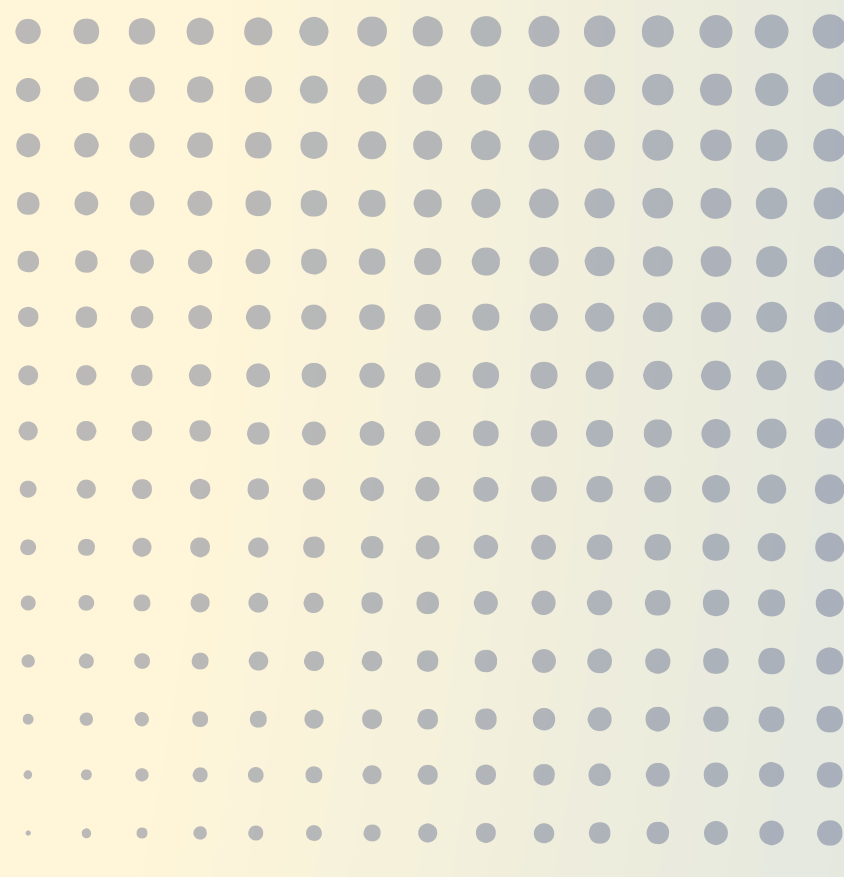

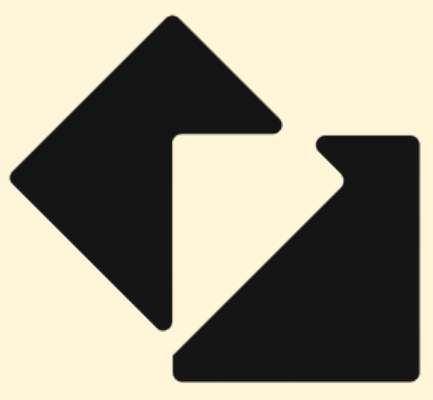

- Identify key strengths for students to emphasize, such as creativity or resilience.
- Provide concrete examples from assessments to bolster their responses.
- Prepare students for behavioral questions by aligning answers with their assessed traits.

For example:

- A student with high conscientiousness can be coached to discuss their meticulous approach to a long-term project.
- A student with strong critical thinking can share how they analyzed a complex issue in a debate or research setting.

The Harvard-trained psychologist's guidance during the Strengths Discovery Session ensures students or mentors are well-prepared, boosting confidence and performance in interviews
